The peasants of Huntingdoshire are proverbial for their boorishness. One day a lady, riding through the grounds of a friend to whom she was on a visit, found the gate closed which was the outlet from the fields to the high road; a peasant boy stepped forward and, bowing, opened the gate that she might pass. "What is your name!" asked the lady. "Tummus," said the boy with another bow, shilling, "I see you are not a Hunting-domains boy, you are so civil." It is quite cultomary to keep up the feed of trotting horses, between seasons, permitting them to become somewhat far, and then when they are to be fitted for sharp work, this fat is worked off and out, while musele is being worked on, and improved in quality, by getting rid of the fat, which has been taking the place of the muselar fibre. In other words, the horse is forced to take on disease, by feeding him in oxcess of his work, and then is cured by restoring the just balance televen work and feed. This is, in my judgment, very bad policy—proving in the end exhaustive of vital force—ruins a great many valuable horses, and injures all that are thus treated. Ample rest is no doubt and the treated. Ample rest is no doubt to maintain the balance. They should be fed physiologically. Usually, farmers do not seem to realize he important position that such a man holds, nor is sufficient caution exercised in filing it. In the first place, the hired man is brought continually into contact with the boys on a farm, He has seen with the boys on a farm, He has seen when they have, and his daily walk and conversation exert a material influence over them. Many a faracer's lad has received his first lesson in injusty from such a teacher, yet the fathers of these same boys have wondered at their deviation from the paths of rectitude.

When the farmer has but one assistant it is obvious that much must be left to his discretion, and that the employer's success depends largely upon the information and real of the man that is employed. He should certainly be interested to an extent beyond the question of wages. Notice your man. Does he allow a barn door to be slammed off its hingse by the wind? A theory of solution has been brought forward by Mr. W. W. Nishol, of the Royal Society, Edinburgh. Solution of salt in allquid results from the attravion of the molecules of the liquid for a molecule of the salt exceeding the attraction of the melecules of the salt for one an other. Saturation ensures when these attractions are balanced. The theory explains variation of solubility with rise of temperature.

Dick's eyes drooped, and a strong shiver shook his stalware form. Ho torraced away, and stood aliently watching the retreating tide as it gathered up the shells and sea-weed and swept them back to the become of their great mother occan. Alas, it was not only the shells and sea-weed which poor Dick saw drifting away beyen this reach! It was some time before he spoke, and his roice sounded very hearse and broken.

"What can I say—except to bid you be worthy of her?" he answered; and then, without another word, he turned and walked quickly away.

Marriot found a letter awaiting him when he returned to his inn that evening. It was from the editor of the paper on which he was omployed, alving him to statum, he was omployed, alving him to statum, he holds he was omployed, alving him to statum, he holds he was only been a work of the baseline of the head no excuss to linger, though he felt very reluctant to leave Holtong. THINGS USEFUL.

THINGS ESEFIL.

The following miscellaneous directions about useful things are condensed from the Scientific American, and they may be therefore considered reliable:—
A Hark TONIC—To preserve the hair and povent it from falling out the following in frequently used: Castor oil, one-half pint; interest continuities, one half pint; interest continuities, one half pint; interest contenties, one half pint; interest contenties, one half pint with alkanet root. There is no state of canthaides and glycerine mixed ogether, is a more active compound and is frequently used to prevent baldness. Squrakkino Sinoss—There is no satisfactory cure for a squeaky shoe. It will amount the content of the state of the content of the conten works.

COTING INK.—Mix about ten parts of jeb black writing ink and 1 part of glycerine. This, if used on glased paper, will fair, next copies by simple pressure of the hand in any good letter copy book. The writing should not be excessively fine nor the strokes uneven or heavy. To prevent acting off the leaves after copying should be removed by blotting paper. By changing the quantity of glycerine you can get an ink which will give several copies.

POLISHING STARCH FOR COLLARS.—Polishing of the very best parafision wax over a slow fire. When liqueshed, remove from the fire, and stir in 100 drops of citronella. Have a number of round new pie tins, clean and nice; place them on a level table and coat them slightly with sweet oil, and pour about 6 tin. The pan may be floated in water to cool the concentrat sufficiently to permit the mixture to be cut or stamped out with a tin cutter into small cakes about the size of a peppermint lezenge. Two of these cakes added to each pint of starch will cause the smoothing iron to impart the finest possible finish to muslim or linen, besides perfuming the clothes in first-class style.

FOR DANDRUFF.—V. O. T. writes; I am troubled with dandrolf in my whiskers, and am rapidly losing them; have tried tonics, washings, oil, without any success. Can you recommend anything of ranchms of horax discolved in a pine of camphor water, washing with the lettion once or twice a week; or much benefit may also be derived by washing with tapld water, agitated with a piece of quillar bark until a strong lather is produced; or with water containings all of tartar in the proportion of two drachms of the salt to a pint of topid water.

BARING FOWDER.—J. M. F. wants to got a formula for making a cheap baking powder. A. Take of tartaris acid, 15 er, sodium bicarbonate, 16 or, sarmonium may also be left out, but its use favors the production of a finer and whiter bread than can be obtained without it.

be kept for a long time even in uncorked venuels.

SHOE BLACKING.—For paste aheo blacking mix one part of wory black, one-half treacle, one-third aweet oil, then add one-eighth hydrochlorie acid. Dilute each ingredient with three times its weight of water before mixing. For liquid poils take 21 by drovy black in fine powder, treacle 14 pound, one-quarter pint of sperm oil. Rub the black well together, add the treacle, and mix. Another recipe is donness of ivery black, 3 cunces coarse sugar, a tablespoonful of aweet oil, and 1 pint weak beer. His First and Last Cigar.
A 14-year-old one of Mr. B. Bunch, of Economy, Marion county, Mo., amoked
a cigar and died from tobacco poison in about half an hour. The boy was smoking in a store and soon began vemiting violently. Ho was carried home, and his fathee went for a physician, about 100 yards distan, but when he returned with the physician the little fellow was dead.

The Tribune.

FRIDAY, MARCH 27, 1885.

The tide of immigration into our great North-West has not yet realized the expectations of the people of Canada. It was thought that by the opening of the Canadian Pacific Railway that portion of the Dominion would have attracted a much larger proportion of European enigration than it has yet received. The reasons for this disappointment are various including the rigour of the climate, and the continual detraction of this country hyagentact the great American colonization and railway companies who have was tracts of land for which they desire to accure sottlers. The greatest impets to extended the continual detraction of the country hyagentact the great American devices the continual desired that the continual detraction of the country hyagentact the great American colonization and railway to Hudson Bay which would bring the wheat fields of the cyptome of the continual desired that they are at present. Notwithstanding the every reason to believe that for five months of the year the Hudson Straits route is quite every reason to believe that for five months of the year the Hudson Straits route is quite from Montreal to the same port, the farmers of the North-west could out-distance all competitors. We are glid to learn that the capitalists who have been considering the construction of a railway from Winnipeg to Hudson Bay are yet determined to carry out their great scheme which must event unly be crowned with well merited auccess.

The Report of the Minister of Agriculture for the year 1884 has come to hand, and is found to contain very much that is interesting. In addition to giving information in Arts and Agricultureand their development in the Dominion, it deals largely with Canadian imagration and emigration, and presents many interesting statistics on those matters. Making allowance for the fact that Canadian imagration and emigration, and approximate. The number of immigrate who arrived in 1884 is stated to be 103,824 as compared with 125,024 during the preceding year. This is a considerable decrease, but there has been a support and Europe to all other countries as well as to Canada. The round mulbers 30,285, of whom 24,440 are supposed to have remained in that part of Canada. The counter of persons who went into Manitola, and the North-West in 1884 was in round numbers 30,285, of whom 2,440 are supposed to have remained in that part of Canada. The number of immigrants, chiefly children, brought to Canada under the suspless of charitable so ciclies and individuals during the year was 2,011. The agent in British Columbia reports an addition to the population of that province of 9,000, of whom only 3,000 were Chinese. During the past min years the Report and effects brought in by these amounted to $19,029,303, On the whole the facts brought out in the Report are of a satisfactory character.

It took a dozon mon fire days of last week to break the spirit of a violous elephan in the winnter quarters of Adam Forepaugh's menegerie, at Philadelphia European agents bought four elephants and shipped thom to this country. The huge beast reached Now York two weeks ago, and were at once transferred to Philadelphia. Three were docile, but the other, Ajax, in a tunker, eight feet high On reaching Philadelphia he became sullen, but-Jack Forepaugh, who has charge of the winter quarters, believing that the brate would become good natured in a day or two, hitched him to a poet and locked him up for the night. A few hours later Ajax broom, and rushed into an apartment in which a deason of the more psecoble elephants lived. He attacked a performing elephant name Baxie, and a desperate fight began. Five or six of the small elephants broke loca. Their frightened cries soon excited every aminal in the buildings, and then air was filled. The night keepers were afraid to attompt to separate Ajax and Baxie, who were trumpoting and charging at each other with great fary. When their huge bodies came together at the end of every rush the shock could be folt througout the place.

Jack Forepaugh was sent for, but before he arrived the watchman discovered that Ajax and Basie were so engaged with each other that they did not heed with each other that they did not heed adoors were enuned, and all the elephants decorated what was except the fighters were driven out. By the time this was accomplished Mr. Forepaugh arrived. He has had thirty years except the fighters were driven out. By the time this was accomplished Mr. Forepaugh arrived. He has had thirty years except in fear of an elephant than an ordinary person does of a dog. Grasping Jan elephant hock—a spike and a hock on a stout handle—he ran between the furious beasts and ordered Basie had now elephant was up and he charged on the man, who cluded him and fastened the hook in the beast's ear. Ajax turned and hore down upon him. The trainer stabbed him with the spike and dodged behind a post. Ajax butted the post down as though it was a reed. The other men ran to Mr. Forepaugh's assistance and anasiled the elephant from so many points that he passed irecred him almost helpless. His other logs were hobbled and he was left alone until daylight, Barle being driven off to another part of the quarters.

On Tuesday morning Ajax was as sullen and vicious as ever. Bad elephants comelines remain in this mood for days, and no man can appreach them with actory. Until such an elephant's pipel were at once taken to convince Ajax that he must obey his keepers. Of the hirty six elephants under Forepaugh's eare none was as hard to subdue as Ajax.

The work of conquering the proud split of Ajax began at nine clocks on Tuesday morning and ended shortly before non yesterday. Beating has no effect upon a mad elephant. It only renders him more stabborn and wicked. The breaker's only hope is to convince such an animal that he is powerless against man. That accomplished the bare. On Tuesday morning four hawers were passed through immense pulleys attached to beams under the roof. Then set of harnnas, shaped something, like a monater shaw a transport and stacked to be about the set of harnnas, shaped something, like a monater shaw a transport as the second Ajax's defiant body. The leather straps, which were three ply thick, covered small chains. All the leather plates were copper rived and a foot wide. Ajax looked as though he were in armor attee being encased. Three hours were spening titting the harmson on him; during the job he shiphy in jured two of the lines of roop that passed through pulleys, and before Ajax knew it his hind feet were sifeet above the ground, and he stood on his front ones in the most approved performing elephant style. For a moment he was paralyzed with astoniahment, but surprise gave places to truy when he spanned the straps and account his shouldness prevented it.
